The extra added attraction, at the very extreme of comedy, will be Jack Wilson, the popular blackface arrist, assisted by Lillian Boardman and Frank Hurst in another chapter of their perennial "Impromptu Revue." A third distinctive feature will be Porter J. White and company in "The Hideaway," described as a remarkably odd and laughable comedy.

Other fine and interesting numbers will be the Three Steindel Brothers in a muster recital: Loval's Dogs, including the sic recital; Loyal's Dogs, including the wonderful "Toque;" James B. Donovan and Marie Lee in "Doing Well, Thank You;" Hooper and Marbury in "Fads and Frolics;" Donald Roberts, "The Strolling Tenor;" the pipe organ recitals, and the International news pictorial.

SIR HERBERT B. TREE SUCCUMBS TO SCREEN

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the noted English star, came to this country last year to participate in Shakespearean ter-centenary celebration, after which he had lanned to return to England. He ha repeatedly refused contracts to appear before the camera in his native land, and winning him over to the picture proposi-tion augurs well for American shrewdness and energy.

After landing in New York Sir Herbert proceeded at once to the Pacific Coast where he was to take part in an outdoor Shakespearean festival. Did You Know Flour Explodes? During the last ten years, about twenty explosions have occurred in cereal, flour and feed mills, with the loss of two mil-lion dollars' worth of property, as well as the killing or injuring of over two hundred employes. Investigations re-garding the causes of these explosions and subsequent fires have not proved con-clusively what are the difficulties to be avoided. In eight cases, the explosio are believed to have originated from the sparks produced in the machines during the grinding process. Tiny particles of gravel or metallic substances coming into contact with the plates of the machine
